The recorded proceedings of council at its regular meeting of January 3rd, 1939, were read and, on motion by Councillor Clark, were adopted and confirmed as written.

An inquiry as to the willingness of the town to sell lots 14 and 15 in Block 33, Plan 6445 V, was received, but as lot 15, above-mentioned, is not as yet forfeited, on motion by Councillor Lisemore, the matter was left in the hands of the chairman of the committee on property and assessment for investigation.

Mr. Guy Torg made written offer of $10.00 for lots 25 and 26 in block 25, plan 6445 V, and on motion by Councillor Welch, his offer will be accepted, providing he complies with the first by-law in the erection of any improvement and provided the approval of the minister to the sale be obtainable.

LOCAL UNITED CHURCH HOLD YEARLY MEET

The annual meeting of Wainwright United Church was held on Tuesday evening of last week, when, due to no doubt to the many other activities scheduled for the same time, the attendance was not as large as had been hoped for. However, all reports of the various bodies connected with the church were presented in a pleasing manner and showed the church to be in a healthy condition, both spiritually and financially.

Rev. Armstrong acted as chairman and Mr. W. S. Clark was secretary.

Following the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, which were adopted as read, reports of the various organizations of the church were given.

The report of the session was given by Rev. Armstrong and work along this line showed very favorable progress. Due to the resignation caused by the removal from town of one of the elders of the church, the name of Mrs. S. R. Bowerman was brought forth as the unanimous choice of those present to fill this position.

Mrs. W. S. Clark presented the report of the Women's Association which showed a substantial bank balance, and also outlined the various activities of this organization during the past year.

The Sunday school report, given by the secretary, Gordon Schlitt, showed a goodly up-keep of attendance among the pupils with an efficient staff of teachers and officers carrying on the work.

Miss Ione Dundas gave a full report of the C. G. I. T. under the leadership of Miss M. Darrach, who is to be much complimented on her untiring efforts in this behalf.

Miss Viola Vail, in giving a summary of the year's activities of the Young People's Union, stated that the spirit of co-operation existed in the group and that everything possible is being done to make the meetings both interesting and instructive.

A report on the Women's Missionary Society showed this group, through Miss M. Darrach, to have fulfilled their allocation for the year.

The treasurer of the board of stewards, Miss Elsie Wright, gave a statement showing the financial standing of the church at the close of the year. The retiring members of the board, Mr. J. Telford and Miss E. Wright, were thanked for their efforts, and a letter of appreciation was ordered sent to Mr. Telford for his untiring work on behalf of this church. To fill these vacancies, Messrs. C. Callas and C. W. McBride were nominated and duly elected.

Miss Rosalie Callas presented the report of the Explorers. A large group of young girls are under her leadership and are working with them in the group and that everything possible is being done to make the meetings both interesting and instructive.

The Mission Circle Girls represent only a small group, but, as reported by Miss Viola Vail, meet regularly to read their study book and spend a social evening together.

Rev. T. E. Armstrong was highly commended for the efficient manner in which he has performed the duties connected with his pastorate. A hearty invitation was extended to him to remain for another year.

At the close of the business, a delicious lunch was served by the ladies of the W. A.

LOCAL EVENTS

Mr. O. R. Hannah left on Monday's train to spend a day or two in the city on business.

Following a cabinet meeting in Ottawa at the week end, Mr. James A. McKinnon, the only Liberal member of the federal house (sitting for Edmonton East) was made a member of the cabinet, being at present minister without portfolio.

We are glad to know that Mrs. P. Springer, who last week unfortunately fell and broke one of her arms, is progressing nicely.

Mrs. A. Gaulin, of St. Albert, visited her daughter, Mrs. Perrin, in town for a short stay while on her return from a visit to Coaticook, Que., where she visited her mother. Mr. A. Gaulin is a son of the visitor too.

In order to accommodate his expanding business, Mr. Lou Torg last week completed a deal whereby he became the owner of the whole of the block where his present office is located, on Queen street.

Mrs. T. E. Armstrong was a week end tripper to Edmonton.

Town's Annual Bonspiel Away To a Fine Start

Bright and early on Monday morning last the local devotees of the broom and stone were on their toes for the annual bonspiel, which will continue till tonight (Wed.) or possibly Thursday.

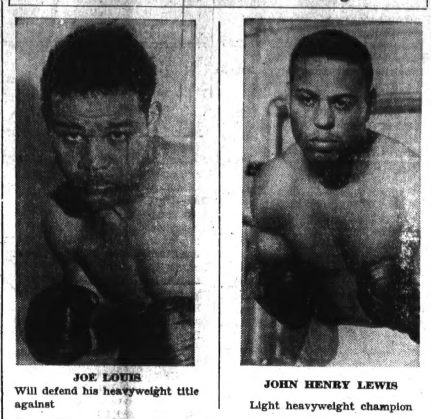

The bonspiel committee, Messrs. Clark, Michon and Baxter have been working hard to ensure success, and Mr. Earl Frickleton is "draw-master" for the affair.

Dr. Springbett and Mr. O. Murray, respectively the president and secretary of the Curling club, have seen to it that a nice number of local rinks are here from quite a number of adjacent towns to compete for the prizes, which are as follows in the several events:

Grand Challenge

Local Curlers Return With Prizes

Messrs. V. Cowley, A. Anderson, C. Coffield and O. Michon, who were entered in the Edmonton bonspiel last week, played there to such good advantage that they were "in the money" in two events. They brought home the first award in the "Red & White" competition as well as winning third in the Grand Challenge.

Mrs. Hannah's rink, too, which was entered in the Edmonton Ladies' Spiel, were in the silverware at the finish, the ladies competing being Messdames O. Hannah, H. Schlitt, V. Nelson and G. Murray. Unfortunately the rink skipped by Mrs. Nordstrom, consisting of Messdames Peterson, Mackenzie and Robinson, were not able to get into the prize money.

C.N.R. Purchases Make Employment

Montreal—Canadian materials and supplies to the value of approximately $51,800,000 were purchased during 1938 by the Canadian National railways from 8,000 firms throughout the dominion, according to a review of the activities of his department by R. C. Vaughan, vice-president in charge of purchases, stores and steamships, issued at headquarters of the National system here recently.

"The Canadian National railways continues to be largest buyer of Canadian materials," Mr. Vaughan said. "That is accounted for by the fact that we have almost one-third more mileage to maintain and operate in Canada, than that of any other railroad."

Town Annual Meet Friday Evening

At 8:00 o'clock in the Town Hall on Friday evening next all citizens who are interested in the welfare of our town and study its affairs should be on hand to hear the report of the Mayor and Councillors of their doings during 1938, and hear the financial affairs explained.

Mayor Middlemore will occupy the chair, and following the discussion (if any) the Board of the Public School will give their annual report and balance sheet for 1938, under the chairmanship of Mr. Alex. Sawers.

Another feature of Friday's gathering will be the presentation of the annual report of the Wainwright municipal board, which will be in the hands of Mr. J. Fuller, head of that body.

You can't kill human pride. No man with a good string of fish ever came home down a back alley.

LOCAL MAN SUFFERS LOSS LIFE PARTNER

There passed away at the Wainwright hospital on Thursday evening last, Mary Ellen, the beloved wife of Mr. Frederick Johns, of town.

"The deceased lady, who has been in poor health for some considerable time, was only a patient for a few days before her death. She was born at Farneworth, Lancs, Eng., in 1897, being now in her 31st year.

Coming to Canada in 1911, with her parents, the family settled in Lloydminster, where she spent the major portion of her life and became beloved by all with whom she came in contact.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Halliwell, and one brother, Arnold, of Lloydminster, are left to mourn with the sorrowing husband, to whom she was married in August, 1929.

The funeral takes place today (Wednesday) in the family plot at Lloydminster, McLeod's parlors making all arrangements.

Popularly known in Lloydminster as Nellie Halliwell in her younger days, deceased gave generously of her musical talent. She studied piano and along with her brother Arnold, with the violin, was often called upon by all local enterprises and churches to supply music for various occasions.

Activity Increased 1939 Home Loans

National Housing act loans for the month of December, 1938, totalled $1,241,374, and provided housing accommodation for 377 families, according to figures now released by the minister of finance.

This brings the total of all loans approved under the National Housing act and its predecessor, the Dominion Housing act, to $27,678,002, and the total number of family housing units to 7,132 as at December 31, 1938. "It is apparent," said Mr. Dunning, "that the amended act is producing the results we had hoped for. During the last four months of 1938, which are of course unfavorable building months, new loans approved aggregated $5,491,000. There is now every indication of a very large increase in the volume of lending activity during 1939."

Loans were made in eight new communities during the month, bringing the list of municipalities in which loans have now been approved to 263.

HOSPITAL-TOWN INDIGENT AGREEMENT IS CANCELLED

A regular meeting of the board of the Wainwright Municipal hospital was held on Jan. 14, when all members were present, and the minutes of the previous meeting were adopted as read.

Moved by Trustee Bleasdale—That the action of the committee in regard to the letter written to the secretary of the College of Physicians and Surgeons be approved.—Carried.

Also that wording of receipt was not clear, and that the board are holding him (Mackenzie) responsible for the $10 difference in the amount paid.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Collette—That the secretary write Mr. Kenneth Kennedy asking him to be good enough to inform the board what he paid Mr. Mackenzie for the horse that was purchased from Mr. T. McDougall.—Carried.

The report was accepted on the motion of Trustee Collette.

The meeting then adjourned.

The March of Time New Elite Feature

Starting February 16 at the week-end show, and every fourth week thereafter, the Elite Theatre will commence a series of "The March of Time."

Today on the new fronts of the world is being written an ever-changing, exciting, dramatic scenario. Its principal players dominate the headlines, are the focal point of international public interest—interest so keen that in two short years "The March of Time" through its unbiased reporting of the activities of the world and its history makers, has itself made cinema history.

To date the following have been released and will be showing at the Elite at week-end shows: "Inside the Maginot," Feb. 16, 17 and 18; "Father Devine's Deal and Prelude to Conquest," March 16, 17 and 18; "British Dictum and U. S. Fire fighters," April 13, 14 and 15; "Uncle Sam the Good Neighbor," May 11, 12 and 13.

Mr. W. Loudfoot, of Edmonton, was in town at the week end, and while here sold one of his small houses in a cash deal.

The news will be read with interest by a large number that Mr. Jack Telford, who was operated on in Edmonton last week, is now reported as progressing nicely.

Mrs. Harley Richardson, who was visiting her relatives in town for a short holiday, has now returned to her home at Cadomin, Alta.

Symathies to Eddie Gehring, who is limping around these days, suffering with a sprained ankle.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Halliwell and Mrs. Johns, all of Lloydminster, were in town and at the death of their daughter, Mrs. F. Johns, who died on Thursday, as noted elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. Alec. Adams, who was under the weather last week, has now shaken off a very bad cold from which he was suffering.

The prizes for this week's big bonspiel, which are on display in the window of the Washburn hardware, make a splendid showing and give credit to Messrs. Mills and Clark for their window-dressing abilities.

All members of the Rebekah degree I.O.O.F. are reminded of the fact that on Tuesday next a military what party is being staged in their hall. Everyone invited.

Local Men Form New Working Group

A successful meeting was held by the Elevator Operators' Brotherhood at the Wainwright hotel on Friday evening last for the purpose of organizing a local group to represent the elevator operators from Kinrossa to Butte on this line.

Mr. Joe Alexander and Mr. Wm. Hoskins from group No. 23 were present to assist with the organizing.

The following officers were elected: Jas. Robinson, of Wainwright, president; Bert Williamson, of Fabyan vice-president; Wm. Bibby, of Wainwright, sec.-treas. Mr. George Murray and Mr. Lyman Alexander, of Wainwright, were elected on the executive.

Mr. James Robinson was elected delegate to represent the local group at the brotherhood convention to be held in Calgary at an early date.

Prizes Won in Mixed Bonspiel

The finals in the recent mixed bonspiel played in town were completed last week, and the results proved that the O. Murray rink, comprising Murray and Wear (jr.) with Mrs. Welch and Mrs. Baubier, beat the Farmers' rink (being G. Murray and R. Greer, with Mrs. Street and Miss Carr) for first award in the primary.

In the secondary, the rink comprising Messrs. Thurston and Armstrong, with Misses C. Ranka and M. Toimie, edged out the McBride rink, which included Mrs. Meade, Miss V. Voros and Mr. R. Thompson.

Annual Meeting Friday, January 27 at 8.00 p.m. in Council Chamber, Town Hall, Wainwright, Alberta

It seems certain, therefore, that as more German goods are admitted into Canada, so automatically will more Canadian wheat be exported to Germany. And the same principle, I believe, will apply to many other foreign countries, too.

Following factors have tended to raise prices: Official confirmation of serious Argentine corn situation as abnormal rainfall and intense heat continues—France reduces import tax on foreign Durum—Increasing apprehension about crop deterioration

The World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strange,
Director, Research Department,
Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

We are now realizing that foreign countries seem unable to buy as much Canadian wheat as we are producing for sale.

For some time I have steadfastly advocated the lowering of Canadian tariffs so as to enable foreign people to sell more of their own goods in Canada, which in turn would enable them to obtain more Canadian dollars with which to buy more of our wheat.

Some, however, have told me they fear that countries such as Germany would not buy more Canadian wheat even though Canada were to purchase more German goods. For my part, I think such fears are groundless. Canada has a trade agreement with Germany, signed at Ottawa on August 22, 1936, by which Germany definitely agrees to purchase Canadian goods and products with all the Canadian money she receives as the result of selling German goods in Canada. Furthermore, Germany agreed to buy wheat alone with at least 35 per cent of the Canadian dollars she receives. Inquiries that I have made in Ottawa confirm the fact that Germany has lived scrupulously up to this agreement.

FERTILIZER SALESMEN

ATTEND SHORT COURSE

Happy New Year for the farmer means success with crops and livestock, and good resolutions made at this season will doubtless include decisions to avoid errors of the past.
The soil which he tills is a complex substance and varies in composition according to its origin and treatment.
The nature of the soil must be considered when determining its cropping, cultural, manure and fertilizer programme, and the farmer ought to avail himself of the information accumulated in the records of many years of experimental work at agricultural institutions in Canada.

Many farmers figure out for themselves or have learned from experience the rotation of crops and cultural practices best suited to their circumstances and some by careful test have found the fertilizer treatment that produces most profitable returns, while others depend on the fertilizer dealer or salesman for advice on this important subject. But salesmen seldom know more than the astute farmer concerning the latter's fertilizer needs, though it is his business as a good salesman to pretend he does.

Recognizing the need for the education of the fertilizer salesman, Professor L. T. Chapman, principal of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College, conceived the bright idea of holding a short course for their instruction in the basic principles of good farming, and the conference was held recently in Truro, concluding with the annual meeting of the Maritime Fertilizer Council. The programme of the short course, drawn up by Professors L. T. Chapman and Kenneth Cox, was excellent in arrangement and comprehensive in scope, addressers being given by members of the college staff and others.

A special feature of the short course programme was the contribution made by Professor L. C. Harlow, provincial chemist, in three separate talks on soil fertility presented with clarity and in terms none

GIRL'S PRINCESS FROCK

Pattern 8846: This new princess gay new Scotch plaids you see "run-

The pansy bed is an effective job of

PRAIRIE PANSY GROWING

In order to grow choice pansies in profusion on the prairies, never allow the plants to remain indoors or under glass for a single moment.
states James McLean, superintendent, Forest Nursery station, Sutherland, Sask.

The first thing to do is to procure choice seed which can be purchased from seed growers who specialize in pansies. Be sure to have your seed on hand by August 15th, for that is the best date to sow the seed.

Prepare the pansy seed bed by making a frame from 5 to 6 inches deep. Place good soil within the frame until it is two inches below the top of the frame. This seed bed should be completed and the soil properly watered during the first few days in August.

On August 15th, sow the seed broadcast and give a light covering of sand or loam. As soon as the seed is sown, cover the entire frame with one ply of burlap, drawn tight, and kept taut. Water through the burlap and do not remove it until the earliest seedlings are two inches high, or beginning to touch the suspended burlap. If several seedlings are touching the burlap, it should be removed from Sept. 10, or 15, by which time the days are getting shorter and the weather cooler, so that there is no danger of sun scald.

Just before freeze-up place a light covering of brush over the pansy bed. The purpose of the brush is to catch snow. Be sure to get a heavy covering of snow. If Nature's methods do not leave sufficient snow, take a hand sledge and shovel and throw the snow on the brush. A good covering of snow should be at least two feet deep. When this is done you can forget about your pansies until it is time to set them out in the spring. Note the advantages of outdoor seeding. No glass necessary, no flat boxes necessary, no pricking off, no damping off and no hardening off of the young plant necessary. Where season is longer, as in Ontario, pansies should be pricked off into a similar bed.

Be sure to get your first start in pansy seed from a pansy seed specialist. A one-ounce packet may cost as much as $1.00, but quality rather than quantity is what is wanted and the $1.00 packet is the cheapest in the long run.

Collect your own seed from your own choice plants as soon as the bloom has fallen off and while the seed pods are still green. In order to get your seed to mature thoroughly, take not the seed pod alone, but about one-third of the plant, leaving the seed pod and its stem intact. By snubbing the plant and by placing the portions removed in a box of about two square feet and by placing a paper over the box your seeds will mature perfectly. After they are thoroughly dry, shell the pods by hand about August 1st, and sow again on August 15th.

Do not let water lie on your pansy seedlings in the spring. It is to avoid this that raising the level of your seed bed is recommended.

If you will follow the foregoing instructions closely you will always have more strong pansy plants than will be required for your own use.

Pouring from Cans

The secret of pouring liquid from a can is to make two holes in the can instead of one, about an inch apart. The one hole is for the liquid to pour from, the other hole to let the air into the can.

The Door Key

That important door key will not be evasive any more when the house-will sew a large-sized dress hook inside her handbag, near the top, on which to hang the key.

To Clean Playing Cards Soiled playing cards can be clean-spirits of camphor and rubbing the card gently. This will restore their

A Convenient High Chair
If four rubber-tipped door stops are screwed into the legs of an ordi-

A solution of peroxide of hydrogen containing a few drops of ammonia will remove ink stains from the

YOUR ANNUAL TOWN'S MEETING

The duty as well as the privilege of every citizen of Wainwright is to be in attendance at the annual town's meeting set for Friday evening in the Town Hall.

The study of the affairs of the town, both socially and financially, should prove an interesting matter for those who are called upon to "foot the bill"; for, although the Council has during the past year increased their bank balance to some extent, judicious spending consistent with town improvements and the added welfare of our citizens should always be considered as justifiable when such spending is upheld by a majority of those affected.

Far too often the average citizen is well content to sit back and "let the other fellow do it," and then declare himself dissatisfied when the outcome is not in accord with his pre-studied views—albeit no-one knows just what those views may be. The annual reports given each year by the Council should prove interesting, and possibly explanations for varying actions may be sought which can be better explained, or justified, at such a meeting as this than on street corners or elsewhere.

At the same meeting, too, the Board of the Wainwright public school will present a reckoning of the actions of that body during the past year, as will also Mr. J. Fuller, chairman, for the municipal hospital; he being the town's representative of that body.

Altogether it should prove a worthwhile evening for all who attend, and one which every ratepayer owes as part of his citizenship.

THROUGH THE EYES OF A COUNTRY WOMAN

By BRIDGET

Have you ever paused to wonder how many millions of words are printed daily? Of course it is an unanswerable question, but it is fascinating to compare up in one's mind's eye the amazing amount of reading matter that is turned out every day. The world would not be the loser if a lot of it never did see the light of day, but what pleasure, hope and knowledge the rest can give! Books can play an important role in anyone's life, and it is of books and reading that I would like to talk with you this week. Books to me are valued friends, and they can be to anyone who turns to them.

The variety of books written today ensures that every taste can be gratified. The fashion in books has changed with the years. In Dickens' time, the leisure class were the public for whom the authors wrote. As they (the leisure class) had plenty of time to kill, they admired long books, and authors supplied them. Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, Seton Merriman, etc., etc., wrote books which seem interminable to modern minds. The lengthy descriptions do not find so much favor as heretofore. The modern mind demands a more "headline" type of reading, and gets impatient at unnecessary interpolations, preferring direct, quick action. This desire to get at the root of the plot at once is due in great measure to the multiplicity of newspapers on the market today. Many papers are sold on their headlines alone, a snappy, exciting, scary or interesting headline is good newspaper psychology. Newspapers themselves have undergone a great change. Years ago pages and pages of reading matter made up some of the best selling newspapers. Now pictures and headlines tell the news in "tabloid form."

Long books can still find a market, for instance, "Gone With the Wind." This is a very long book, yet it has had an amazing success—probably as great a success as had that absurd bit of nonsense, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." That success was an indication of the mind of the reading public at that time, that they could rave over a book which was filled with staccato utterances, and appalling grammar.

The most "worthwhile" books are by no means always the best sellers—it depends greatly on what you demand of a book, which one will appeal to you.

Modern laxity of speech is condensed in my mind with modern books. The majority of people do not take the time to speak correctly, so they do not clamor for a book to be well written, as long as it is packed full of drama or quick incident.

When a modern author pauses to write a good book, it can be compared favorably with the best. "The Good Earth," written by Pearl Buck, which won the Nobel prize for literature this year, is a thoughtful, slow moving study of Chinese life. G. B. Sterns "Tents of Grael," was a long book full of people and their doings, not exciting, but a fine study of a Jewish family. The same applies to Naomi Jacobs' "That Awful Lie."

Each person must choose the type of book to suit themselves. Personally, I like a long book beautifully written for that reason my shelves are heavy with the books of the late W. J. Locke. To read the beautifully phrased sentences of Locke is an education; there is music in his assembly of words. His command of English is so great that it is necessary sometimes to call in a dictionary when enjoying his works.

The reading of books is an art, and if one learns to read with all the senses a much greater measure of enjoyment can be obtained. The music of words is as real as the music of a song. Say slowly a few lines of Shakespeare or a few verses of the Psalms, giving each word its full value, and the words will make music in your brain. It seems to me that when we learn to appreciate the beauty of words rightly placed, our speech will become better, not so slangy and slipshod. The unburied courtesy speech of a few centuries ago may well be "pre-machine age"—but trying to time our speech to the speed of the age is really rather detrimental to our mode of expressing ourselves.

To get the greatest benefit out of reading, make a habit of using a pencil. If you have never tried this method I believe you will be surprised at the greater enjoyment you will derive from your reading. Most of us are naturally mentally lazy, and we look on reading as a relaxation, but it can be such a worthwhile relaxation if its possibilities are used to the full. Making notes of points that phase, intrigue and interest us will keep those points ever in our minds. Taking a little time to sit and ponder over a newly finished book to label our thoughts as it will, make that book doubly interesting to us, and our reading of it more worthwhile.

I am often asked to recommend books, but I always hesitate to do this, as books that please one can be poison to another. I personally prefer long books, as I feel the characters can become real friends, and my only regret is when I have to turn over the last page and let these new-found friends go out of my life.

If good English interests and pleases you, the books of Locks and Galworthy will please you too. A man who always has a cause before him who writes his extremely good and readable novels is Sir Philip Gibbs A. J. Cronin and Warwick Deering always write about doctors, both very fine writers. The former's last novel, "The Citadel," has made quite a furor in the world.

There are many good women authors to choose from: Mary Hasty Bradley, Pearl Buck, G. B. Stern Naomi Jacobs, Susan Ertz, to mention a very few.

Books are fascinating and reading very worthwhile, but I feel that as a subject which interests me so much that I do not know when to quit talking about them—which I must do, right now!

Do you have trouble kindling a fire in your open fireplace? A Californian advocates the use of dried orange or grapefruit skins for kindling. The oil in the skins makes them burn hot and fast, and gives a nice aromatic smell. But they must be bone dry.

Tippe, as many know, is a popular dish in England. But tippe as a style item comes as a surprise. It is common, garden variety of tripe treated and tanned by a special process that makes it softer than felt, with a suede like feel. It is used for hats, belts and gloves. Doubtless another name will be selected before it becomes very popular here.

Once you have picked out a good hair brush, it is up to you to see that the bristles have a good long life. No ammonia should ever be used in the washing water. If the brush becomes very dirty, a little borax may be mixed with the water. But the best way is to dip them into the water and wash with a toothbrush which has been dipped in water and soaped lightly. Try to keep the backs of the brushes from getting wet.

Knitted frocks, a classic fashion borrowed from English women, are giving a more important part in the wardrobes of chic American women. They are practically wrinkle proof and are popular for business wear as well as many other occasions.

Since modern Chinese women have discovered that high-heeled shoes create the illusion of small feet, the centuries-old custom of binding the feet is fast disappearing.

Demon's Decoy

by Mildred Snow Gleason

Elizabeth Allen, employed as secretary to a Professor Auer in New York, is bewildered when he suddenly dismisses her without giving any reason. Shortly afterward, in her search for another job, she discovers she is being shadowed. Then, she is unexpectedly engaged to go to Syria to become secretary to Dr. John Morris, who has a sanatorium near Beirut. On her arrival she is disturbed by a warning from the doctor's young assistant, Dr. Stephen Payne, that it is a "peculiar household." Her nervousness is increased when, from her window, she sees a young man unsuccessfully attempt to escape from the place by scaling the garden wall. When Dr. Morris introduces her to his colleague, Professor Meres, she realizes she once met him in Professor Auer's laboratory, but he denies it and professes not to know Auer. She later discusses this with Stephen.

CHAPTER VII

Elizabeth suddenly laughed. "Dr. Payne, only a few hours ago, you were warning me not to give way to nerves, and now that is just what you are doing."

He smiled, and Elizabeth thought that he had the nicest smile she had ever seen.

"I have reason for my 'nerves'," he said quietly, "but had hoped to spare you as much as possible. Excuse me for thinking, at first, you might become nervous in this atmosphere."

"What makes you think now that I won't?"

"Simply because you can laugh although you know perfectly well that Meres lied to you about Auer."

"Oh, well," Elizabeth said, "perhaps he didn't want Dr. Morris to know that he and Auer were working on something together."

"Undoubtedly Meres had good reasons for lying," Stephen agreed dryly, "but Auer is so well known, and so many people make an effort to meet him, that your explanation is weak."

"Are you trying to frighten me now?"

"Sure," Stephen grinned. "It's worth trying. You see, I like the timid clinging-vine type of girl."

"Then you won't like me. Good night, Dr. Payne."

"You mean, 'Good night, Stephen. But don't go yet. I—'"

Stephen broke off abruptly, and made a sign to be quiet.

As he did so, Elizabeth heard the living-room door open, and then the voices of Professor Meres and Dr. Morris. They seemed to be having an argument, but what they were saying was only a confusion of words.

Then a few sentences came clearly: "But the age is wrong!" said Dr. Morris.

"Only one year," Meres replied. "That can be fixed."

The voices died away, Elizabeth touched Stephen on the arm.

"We'd better run," she whispered, "before Dr. Morris finds us here."

"No fear. He sleeps downstairs. Besides, they've gone into the laboratory."

"Stephen . . . what were they talking about?"

"Haven't the foggiest idea."

"Stephen, when I was in my room before dinner, I saw a young man try to escape from the garden. He—"

He cut his hands on the glass on top of the wall.

An expression of pain crossed Stephen's face.

Will to Live is Important

Among the men whose friendship I enjoyed was the late C. W. Barron owner of the Wall Street Journal.

He told me two stories. The first was about a man who accumulated a large fortune, built a house on Fifth Avenue, put his feet on a window-sill, and said: "Now, I am going to enjoy myself." But he was like a watch spring which has been wound up tight for a long time: and being suddenly released, snaps in pieces. After only a few months of idleness he died.

The second story had been told to Barron by a noted surgeon. A woman, taken to the hospital for a slight operation, died a few hours before the anesthetic was applied. The surgeon could not understand, looking into her history, he discovered that from the moment the operation was decided upon she had begun to prepare for the worst. The surgeon said: "That taught me a lesson. I shall never again, as I find out what preparations the patient has made, if a person is so little about holding on to life that he makes all preparation to die, then some other surgeon can have the job."

Barron said that by the degree of their courage and faith men's lives determine how long they will live.

I believe that a true—those who live who can't live; that when interest ceases, the heart stops. None of us can escape the process of decay, but there are many things I want to learn, so many places I want to see, that I hope to fool the old heart and kidneys for quite a while and so, I trust, will you.

Court Not the Haters

A group of people had listened to a candidate's radio speech and after it was over, there was a good deal of criticism. I noticed that one intelligent woman took no part in the conversation, and when I asked her why, she said: "The older I grow the more I hate haters."

It's a remark to set one thinking. Down through the ages HATE has dragged its bloody trail across the heart of this good earth. Hate moved native at each other's throats in wars; hate kindled the fires of persecution. Hate forced the hemlock to the lips of Socrates, and raised a Jerusalem I've savage "Voices of 'Crucifixion'."

One might say truthfully that a very good measure of the historical worth of a man or institution: "Did he or it add to or subtract from the total of human hate?"

Hippoleon does not stand the test. Back and forth across the face of the globe he trampled in blood-drenched boots, until at last there was only one sentiment in the hearts of men and women of that whole continent: "I hate Hippoleon." He resolved to rid himself forever of this conscience-destroyer, a bitter unrelenting hate.

Businesses could properly stop once a year and check themselves by this measuring rod—How much more or less are they liked or disliked than twelve months ago? What have they done, or what are they doing, if an thing, that adds to the total of hate?

"I'm sorry you had to see that," he muttered.

"Who is he?"

"A patient."

"He didn't look ill. On the contrary."

"He isn't ill physically."

"He didn't look mentally deranged, either," Elizabeth insisted. "He only looked desperately unhappy."

Stephen hesitated, then said slowly, "I know practically nothing about the case—it is not in my hands—but it appears that he occasionally suffers from delusions. Mild ones up to now, I am told, but I fear that in time, he will be driven to."

Stephen broke off.

"To what?"

Stephen smiled ruefully. "I've said too much—but I'll tell you my opinion. My impression is that Michael Brown is only slightly off balance nervously. It should not be a difficult case to cure. At least so I thought until recently. Recently, however, he has been insisting that he is a prisoner here. This is not true—he came of his own volition for treatment."

Elizabeth looked steadily at Stephen.

"I insist that the man I saw was frightened and desperate—but not unbalanced."

"That is the impression a layman would have."

Elizabeth's eyes narrowed slightly. "I am not a doctor, Stephen, but before I had my job with Auer I worked in the office of a well-known psychiatrist."

She stopped, still looking at Stephen steadily. "You were saying," she resumed, "that he was being driven to—to what?"

Stephen shrugged. "My feeling is that Michael Brown is here of his own free will—or, at least, to a first-class case of neurosis—by fear."

"Fear of what?"

"I wish I knew."

Elizabeth was thoughtful a moment. "Are you sure he is here of his own free will?" she asked firmly.

"I have no reason to doubt it. But, as I said before, I have nothing to do with the case. My work is all in the laboratory. All I know about it I have learned from Dr. Morris and Nurse Hilton."

"And you aren't curious enough to find out more?"

"Of course I'm curious, Elizabeth, but if I went about it as bluntly as you are doing, I'd never get an answer."

Elizabeth laughed good-naturedly. "All right—now that I'm put in my place, I'll say good night."

Stephen grinned. "Sweet dreams," he murmured.

Elizabeth retired to her room and soon afterwards was in bed. But, although she was very tired, she found it hard to go to sleep. All the events of the day crowded into her mind.

It was long past midnight and she was just about to drift off, when a knock on the door jarred her back into complete wakefulness.

She sat up in bed. "Who is there?" she called tensely.

"A friend." The answer came in a low voice—hardly more than a whisper. "That's my advice and get out of this accursed house tomorrow!"

CHAPTER VIII

Jumping out of bed, Elizabeth threw on her dressing gown, swiftly crossed the room, and flung the door open. But the corridor, now only dimly lighted, was empty.

Without hesitating, she ran down the corridor to the landing and looked down the stairs. The hall below, still ablaze with light, was also empty. She stood perfectly quiet, listening, but there was no sound of any sort.

Finally, she turned and went slowly back to her room. She locked the door and sat down on the edge of the bed, her heart pounding.

The voice she had heard had been very low and somewhat hoarse—she could not tell whether it had been that of a man or a woman. But one thing was certain. It had not taken her more than thirty seconds to get to the door, and it did not seem possible for anyone to have reached the downstairs hall and vanished by the time she had arrived on the landing. That meant that the whisperer must have gone into one of the rooms off the corridor.

Feeling calmer now, she got into bed. In the morning, she thought, she would find out who occupied the various rooms. She would ask Stephen. He would know.

When she awoke the next morning the white walls of her room glared in the sunlight. Although it was early, the day was already hot.

As she dressed, she puzzled over the mysterious warning of the night before. The whole thing was ridiculous and yet—

She left the room and on her way down the corridor she counted the doors. Including her own, there were exactly five on either side. She sighed. Nine rooms into which her "friends" could have vanished. That didn't make the problem very easy to solve. Dismissing it temporarily from her mind, she went downstairs.

In the dining room Mrs. Graham was pouring coffee at the sideboard. She said good morning sourly, adding, "Eggs?" in a tone that sounded as though she resented having to give Elizabeth anything at all to eat.

"Thank you—so—bottled," Elizabeth smiled.

Just then Stephen came into the room.

"Good morning," he said cheerfully. "Sleep well?"

"Thanks, yes."

Elizabeth noticed that there were only two places at the table.

"An early or late?" she asked.

Mrs. Graham sniffed. "Nurse Hilton breakfasts at seven," she remarked acidly.

"I breakfast at eight," Stephen put in. "Dr. Morris has his in the study at eight-thirty, and Miss Morris has hers in her room at eleven."

He grinned. "There you have the schedule."

"And I?" Elizabeth asked.

"With me at eight," Stephen replied promptly.

Mrs. Graham sniffed again, but said nothing. Elizabeth hoped she would leave, but she didn't. She remained by the sideboard like a watchful guard.

"As soon as you have finished I am to show you to the laboratory," she said finally.

Elizabeth took a hurried gulp of coffee.

Stephen laughed. "No hurry—the doctor won't be ready for you for an hour or so."

"Dr. Payne," Mrs. Graham said sharply, "who is running this place?"

"Not you, Mrs. Graham," Stephen replied calmly.

Two little red patches appeared in the old woman's shrunken cheeks.

"Nor you," she muttered. She started towards the door. With her hand on the knob, she turned toward Elizabeth. "I'll be back for you in ten minutes."

She went out, closing the door noisily.

Elizabeth frowned. "So you and Mrs. Graham are enemies?"

"No, not!" Stephen leaned back in his chair. "Far from it. We understand each other perfectly, but she doesn't let her bully me. That's her biggest fault. She loves to bully."

"It seemed to me that Dr. Morris was afraid of her."

"Keen observer. Yes, Dr. Morris is a bit nervous with her, but you often find men of his type bullied by their wives or housekeepers or spinster sisters."

"It seemed more than that to me," Elizabeth argued.

"Indulging in a little—er—imagination!" Stephen grinned.

"Call it feminine intuition. Anyway, never mind. How many of the rooms in my corridor are occupied?"

"Why?"

"Answer me first, and then, perhaps I'll tell you," Elizabeth teased.

"Well, the first one on the right is Mary's, the one next to yours is Nurse Hilton's, and the one directly opposite yours is Mrs. Graham's."

"Hum, two empty rooms between Mrs. Morris and Nurse Hilton, and four empty ones on the other side of the corridor. He or she would have had time to slip into any one of them," Elizabeth mused.

Stephen stared at her. "May I ask what you are talking about? Or are you just mumbling nothing?"

Elizabeth told him about the whispered warning.

Stephen whistled softly. "That sounds like Mary or Michael," he said slowly, "and it can't have been Michael, because he is kept locked up at night. Besides—"

"Why Mary, necessarily?" Elizabeth interrupted. "Why not Mrs. Graham or Nurse Hilton or Ahmed or—even you, for that matter?"

"You can count me out," Stephen smiled. "I'm not given to hoarse whispering. As for picking on Mary, it's just the sort of melodramatic thing she'd think of. However, for the sake of argument, I'll admit that it might also have been Mrs. Graham or Nurse Hilton."

"Why not Ahmed?"

"Because, if you are right in believing that the person only had time to vanish into one of the rooms, it can only be one of the three women."

"Why?"

"For the simple reason that the empty rooms are kept locked—and I possess the only keys to them."

"That does seem to narrow down," Elizabeth agreed, "but why should any one of the three women want me to leave this house?"

"Especially," said Stephen, his voice serious, "why should Mary want you to leave—and it sounds like Mary?"

CHAPTER IX

Elizabeth was silent, toying with her fork, her eyes fixed on the tablecloth. When she looked up, she found Stephen watching her.

"Well?" he said.

"I find it difficult to believe that Nurse Hilton did it," Elizabeth said.

Stephen nodded. "I think you can safely rule her out."

"As for Mrs. Graham, why should she? She had already more or less warned me about this place—yesterday afternoon."

"She did!" Stephen jerked himself up in the chair. "What did she say?"

"More or less what you did in the car coming out—that I was too young to be here and that she didn't understand it."

"She feels it too," Stephen muttered under his breath.

"Stephen," Elizabeth said firmly after a moment's silence, "I'm tired of all this mystery. I think I have a right to demand that you tell me what's in your mind. You talk and act so strangely."

Stephen smiled faintly, but his eyes were troubled.

"You are quite right," he said, "but unfortunately there is nothing I can tell you, because I don't know anything."

"You must know something. At least you suspect something," Elizabeth spoke coldly, tired of his beating around the bush.

Her tone was not lost on him. He looked at her, meeting her eyes steadily.

"I understand how you feel," he admitted, "and I'll tell you all I know. It isn't much, but it will explain why I was surprised when I saw you yesterday, and why I do not understand why you were picked for this job."

He paused, frowning, then went on. "When I first came here, a year ago, everything ran smoothly and quietly, and we all did our respective jobs without any clashes of personality. Dr. Morris was chiefly interested in research and did not like to have many patients, but we did have four, and two other nurses besides Nurse Hilton. It was not unusual."

The door opened suddenly, and Mrs. Graham stuck her head in.

"It's high time you got to work, young lady!" she said sharply. "You, too, Dr. Payne," with a severe look at Stephen.

Stephen glanced at his watch and jumped up.

"Right you are, Mrs. Graham," Elizabeth swallowed her chagrin at the interruption, and followed Stephen to the door. He gave her a quick look, then was off.

"Come along, Miss," said Mrs. Graham. "You are to go to the study instead of the lab."

Elizabeth followed the housekeeper to the doctor's study, which was at the back of the house and was connected with the laboratory.

Dr. Morris, dressed in white, greeted her perfunctorily, then indicated a litter of papers on the desk.

"See what you can do about putting these notes into shape," he said, in his smooth voice.

"Yes, Doctor."

"If there is anything you don't understand, I'll be in the laboratory."

He left the room and, in the brief second that the door into the laboratory was open, Elizabeth caught a glimpse of Stephen and Professor Meres bending over a table. Then the door was closed.

Elizabeth set to work. It was a type of work with which she was quite familiar and, after a few minutes, she settled down happily, concentrating only on what she was doing, forgetful of time and place.

"Miss Allen."

She was so engrossed in her work that the voice startled her. She had

"You're not an easy face to forget," she answered quietly.

"I saw at once that you recognized me, but I had very good reasons for lying."

He stopped and stared at her, his eyes so cold and penetrating that she had to look away. "I ask you to forget that you ever saw me before, or that you know I have met Professor Auer."

"And if I don't?" Elizabeth asked the question almost in spite of herself.

Meres stood up. "That will be to your disadvantage—not mine," he said slowly.

Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

There are cycles in jewel fashions as there are cycles in painting, architecture, interior decoration and clothes. Jewelry is becoming more romantic, heavier, more imaginative and more elaborate than for some seasons past. Stones are larger, mountings more important. The romantic influence is seen in the use of tiny diamond wrist watches which are round in shape rather than square, rectangular or oval. Another romantic trend is the revival of how knot shapes for diamond pins.

Blooming in colorful profusion, tropical flowers have been picked and transplanted into crystal clips, pins, bracelets and earrings in gay new spring and summer jewelry.

Book of the Week: "Meet Yourself as You Really Are" by William Gerhardt and Prince Leopold Loewenstein. What man or woman can really resist reading about his or Bothered by "middle-aged spread"? Don't let it get you; control your posture instead. And here's the way to do it: Never stand or sit with the abdomen lax and protruding. Hold it in so that a real restraint will be felt on the muscles front and sides. Never permit your shoulders to rise and stay up, tensely. They must be dropped to insure a neck stretched high at the back which, in turn, will guarantee a chin held erect.

"That's a skyscraper," announced the guide.

"Oh, my!" said the little old lady. "I'd love to see it work."

TAPIOCA TIPS

Quick-Cooking Tapioca Cream
One or two egg yolks, 4 cups milk,
1-3 cup quick-cooking tapioca, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 or 2 egg whites, 1 teaspoon flavoring.
Double Boiler Method: Mix egg yolk with small amount of milk in top of double boiler. Add quick-cooking tapioca, sugar, salt and remaining milk. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 10 to 12 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Remove from fire. (Tapioca will be well distributed throughout, but mixture will be thin. Do not overcook.) Beat egg white until just stiff enough to hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg
white. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, stir in flavor; chill. Serve plain or with cream. Serves 7 to 9.

Saucepan Method: Mix egg yolk with small amount of milk in saucepan. Add quick-cooking tapioca, sugar, salt, and remaining milk. Bring mixture quickly to a full boil over direct heat, stirring constantly. Remove from fire. (Mixture will be thin. Do not overcook.) Beat egg white until stiff enough to hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg
white. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, stir in flavor; chill.

To make half this recipe, use 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca and 1-3 other ingredients. Cook 8 to 10 minutes in double boiler, or bring quickly to a full boil over direct heat.

Pudding is delicious poured over fresh or canned fruits, served with a sauce, or combined with dried fruits, nuts, or coconut.

ORANGE GINGER ALE CUP

Combine and put in cocktail glasses:
2 cups chilled orange segments
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons sugar
Just before serving, pour over:
1 chilled 12-oz. bottle of ginger ale
Garnish with sprigs of mint.
Serves 6-8.

FUEL FOODS FOR WINTER
Our bodies require more "fuel" foods in winter than in warmer weather. The dried Lima bean rates exceptionally high in fuel value and is an excellent alkaline-reaction food as well. Try the recipes below as suggested tasty and energy-creating side dishes:

Limas in Tomato Sauce
2 cups cooked, dried Limas
1 tablespoon finely chopped onions
1 tablespoon butter or bacon fat
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
1-2 cup strained tomato or tomato sauce

Cook onion in butter 5 minutes; add tomato, salt, pepper and Limas. Heat to boiling point.

Savory Lima Salad
2 cups cooked, dried Limas
1-2 cup finely cut celery
2 small green onions
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 cucumber, sliced
1 tablespoon chopped parsley.
Combine all ingredients and mix with highly seasoned French dressing. Arrange on lettuce leaves.

Canadian Salmon Pancakes
1 1-lb. can Canadian salmon
Salt and pepper
2 cups mashed potatoes
1-2 teaspoon dry mustard
Flake the salmon, crush the bones, remove the skin, but add the oil (which contains essential vitamins) to the mashed potatoes. Season with salt, pepper and mustard. Shape into flat pancakes and pan-fry in bacon drippings. Serve in a stack with butter or a thick soup for a sauce.
Creamed Finnan Haddock on Toast Creamed finnan haddock needs no introduction, but serve it on toast, with grated cheese sprinkled on top and run under the broiler. For a staggered breakfast when various members of the family come down a few minutes apart, put your finnan haddle in a baking dish and sprinkle the cheese on top. Then keep it hot in the oven and serve on toast piping hot.

LUXURIES FROM LEFT-OVERS
Have you some leftover cake on hand? Or perhaps some apricots?
Well! without taking or without boiling, you may go right ahead and prepare a healthful, delicious, economical dessert dish that will both please and satisfy. Here are the necessary directions:

Banana Royal
1 package orange rennet powder
4 pieces sponge cake (left-over cake may be used)
1 pint milk
1 banana Place the pieces of cake (about two inches square or smaller) in the bottom of the dessert dishes. Make rennet-custard according to directions on package, and pour immediately over pieces of cake. Let set until firm —about 10 minutes. Then chill in refrigerator. When ready to serve, put slices of banana on top of each rennet-custard.

Apricot Presto
1 package chocolate rennet powder
1 pint milk
1 cup apricot puree (cooked apricots which have been put through a strainer)

The Family DOCTOR

THE DOCTOR'S PROBLEM
Nobody knows more the effects of a national depression than the family doctor. He gets the full force of it. His customers fall down in their ability to meet his moderate charges; his own table and wardrobe dwindle. Even his savings depart, as mine have. But he does not complain of misfortune to himself—he sees future effects of famine on those he serves—and gives his life. The ill-nourished children and mothers of today, will be the weaklings of tomorrow—of next year and the next! The real results of the "depression" have not yet commenced.
The very well-to-do will not suffer. But there are so many of the thousands who are not in that zone; and, these for the most part, fall under the care of the faithful family doctor.

I, myself, see children all about me, that will never attain the state of vigorous manhood and womanhood—because of this awful depression,— if you are fount to dismiss it with such a benign name. . . .
What to do? Well here is an instance where I must answer, "I don't know." Relief from this thing cannot come in a day—nor in a year—nor two years, in all probability. The fangs of the thing have penetrated our very nation's heart. It is the great mass of "common people" that constitutes our America. Without them our land would perish from the very weight of its gold! There is no more helpless body than that of what is termed the "idle rich."
We must educate. It seems to me, the World War was a most effectual lesson to establish peace. Nobody but an inhuman devil could lay plans for future war! I have my statement on the lesson learned from the last outbreak of hell. We must educate.

Nabisco Wafers
Make rennet-custard according to directions on package. When filling dessert glasses fill within 1-4 inch from top. When ready to serve, spread the apricot puree lightly over the top of each rennet-custard. Garnish with crushed Nabisco Wafers.

The Legion Notice BoardWe are in receipt of a circular letter from our Dominion Command, which contains the following:
"Provincial commands, and indeed the entire membership of the Legion, will be extremely gratified upon the announcement by the prime minister that the government proposes to extend existing facilities to provide for free medical treatment for ex-service men who served in a theatre of war, not having the means to provide it for themselves."

This means, we take it, that a man does not now have to be a pensioner to be entitled to free medical services, but he will not be entitled to pay and allowances while an inmate of any hospital, nor will he be allowed transportation vouchers, as is the case with those in receipt of a pension. This is, however, merely our opinion. Perhaps when full particulars reach us we may find that consideration has been given to these points as well.

Notice the words, "not having the means to provide it for themselves." We wonder who is to be the judge of that, and what will be considered "sufficient means."
